3. Background information

Among the 17 countries covered by IOM's Regional Office in Cairo are established countries of destination such as the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), as well as countries of origin of labour migrants like Sudan, Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco.

These regional migration dynamics offer opportunities to leverage migration to support local and national development efforts. However, they also come with risks relating to migrant protection, social conflict and, more recently, with significant implications for migrants' health and sustainability of livelihoods dependent on remittances.

IOM's Labour and Human Development (LHD) programmes seek to mitigate the risks and augment the opportunities of labour mobility. International labour migration is playing a growing role in an increasingly interconnected global economy. Workers have become ever more mobile, engaging in temporary and circular migration, as well as onward and return migration. These dynamics are present throughout MENA region in terms of migratory patterns, investment patterns, and remittance uses in countries of origin. More recently, temporary and seasonal labour channels, as well as more permanent labour migration, have been established between EU and non-EU Member States in Northern Africa.

Longer term demographic and labour market trends indicate that labour migration will play an increasingly important role in the region. IOM works to maximize the positive impacts of migration for migrants, their families and the broader community in countries of origin and destination. This work includes facilitating labour mobility and enhancing government capacity to effectively manage labour mobility; strengthening links between migration and development, (particularly through diaspora engagement in development initiatives); and supporting migrant integration and social cohesion in communities of destination.

4. Duties, responsibilities and output expectations:

Within the framework of the Fellowships Programme for Technical Cooperation Capacity Building and Human Resources Development, the Fellow will work under the direct supervision of the Regional Thematic Specialist (RTS) on Labor Mobility and Human Development (LHD), and under the overall supervision of the Regional Director of the Regional Office Cairo.

She/he will assist in pursuing new LHD programming opportunities, building on his/her thematic strengths focused on labor mobility and skills mobility, and /or social cohesion and/or diaspora engagement and /or enterprise development. He/she will insofar seek to expand partnerships in coordination with the RTS with interested and relevant stakeholders (private sector, other UN agencies, civil society), in line with the overall programmatic direction as charted in the Global Compact for Migration (GCM), as well as in IOM's Strategic Plan and the regional strategy for MENA.

The Fellow will work on identifying intraregional and interregional migratory developments and contribute to assessing related labor migration governance challenges of countries of origin, receiving countries and transit countries.
