3. Background information

UNICEF works in over 190 countries and territories to save children's lives, defend their rights, and help them fulfill their potential, from early childhood through adolescence.

At UNICEF, we are committed, passionate, and proud of what we do. Promoting the rights of every child is not just a job – it is a calling.

UNICEF is a place where careers are built: we offer our staff diverse opportunities for personal and professional development that will help them develop a fulfilling career while delivering on a rewarding mission. We pride ourselves on a culture that helps staff thrive, coupled with an attractive compensation and benefits package. UNICEF believes all children have a right to survive, thrive and fulfill their potential – to the benefit of a better world.

The Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan is a leader in the region for the rights of its children. Working closely with the Government of Jordan, civil society, the private sector, and communities, UNICEF Jordan Country Office aims to sustain results achieved for children to date, and strive to further improve policies, national institutions and programmes, for the well-being of every child in Jordan, in line with Jordan's Vision 2025 and the National Human Resources Development Strategy (2016-2025) towards achieving the Sustainable Development Goals. Our programmes focus on improving the lives of the most vulnerable and disadvantaged children in the Kingdom, irrespective of their nationality, gender, religion, or background. Our main pillars include Child Protection; Education; Water, Sanitation & Hygiene; Adolescent and Youth Engagement, Health and Nutrition; Social Protection; and Operations.

UNICEF Child Protection in Jordan

The protective environment for children in Jordan continues to address the social norms that underpin violations of children's rights and improve the capacity of institutions to prevent this violence and to respond to children who survive these violations. However, overall, child protection system and enabling environment for the protection of children and women continue to be strengthening. Refugee children have been particularly vulnerable because of their status. Refugee children face bullying, violence and separation from their families. Both Jordanian and refugee children are affected by high rates of child marriages and child labour. Children with disabilities, unaccompanied and separated children, children without parental care, children from marginalized minority communities and children living and/or working on the streets face particular inequities, along with children from the poorest quintile.

While the Government of Jordan has made significant improvements in protecting children, several challenges continue to negatively impact children's lives including children experiencing physical, emotional, and sexual violence at home, schools, childcare institutions, communities and online. In addition, children and women experience gender-based violence, many girls are married before the age of 18 years old, many children engage in the worst forms of child labor including children and adolescents begging in the street, the child-sensitive justice system is not in place, and children deprived of parental care are housed in state and non-governmental care institutions across Jordan.

UNICEF continues to support the Government of Jordan and its partners to promote and safeguard the rights of all children and young people by strengthening a sustainable child protection system, including laws and policies, procedures, and practices in line with the Global Strategy for Child Protection 2021-2030. The national child protection system aims to respond to the protection needs of children and ensure that all children are protected from all forms of violence, live with dignity in a protective and safe environment and have an equal opportunity to fulfil their potential. In 2024 and beyond, the focus will be ensuring policies, laws and procedures are in place to enhance the national child protection system, ensuring quality child protection services are delivered by knowledgeable and skilled service providers, and ensuring child protection violations are prevented by enhancing the capacity and resilience of children, caregivers, and communities.
